NOON REPORTS.

Fasting Fool's Finishing.

NEW YORK, August 7.—Dr. Tanner is in a good condition and will undoubtedly complete the fast at noon. A large crowd is in attendance. At 11 o'clock he stood at his window on 13th street, looking at the crowd in the streets. A few minutes previously he walked one lap around the hall. His brother-in-law, M. M. Gardiner, called on him this morning. His visit seemed to make the faster nervous and he complained of "goneness" in his stomach. At 7 o'clock this morning he had a fit of vomiting. He then got up and dressed; at 7:30 he was much exhausted and laid down on his cot. He remained in this position until 10:15 when he went into the lower hall after a walk he again laid down and was covered with a blanket. At 10:50 he arose and walked into the front room. A large table of watermelons, fruits, bread, etc., is spread in the hall.

Dr. Tanner completed his forty days' fast at noon to-day. As soon as the time was up the crowd cheered Tanner enthusiastically. About 1,000 persons were in the hall and a numerous crowd on the sidewalk. He at once drank a glass of milk and called for a Georgia watermelon. This he tapped, dug his hand into and ate heartily of. When remonstrated with he asked to be left alone, saying, "No, my Lord, I am running this now." When he placed a glass of milk to his mouth he remarked, "Gentlemen, you don't believe that's good." The signal for the expiration of the fast was a whistle from a factory in the vicinity. When it blew Tanner had a peach in his hand, but before he could put it into his mouth, somebody snatched it away from him. In response to the plaudits of the assemblage, Tanner, who was sitting upon a chair placed on the table, raised his handkerchief over his head. At a quarter past twelve, Tanner got down from the table and left the hall in a coach in charge of Dr. Gunn, who took him to his own residence, where he will undergo careful medical treatment. During the morning about 2,000 persons visited the hall. Just before noon his temperature was found to be 99, pulse 92 and respiration 17.

Tanner's weight at the end of his fast, was 121½ pounds, showing a loss of 36 pounds during 40 days.

Gen. Garfield Speaks a Piece.

NEW YORK, August 7.—A reception and serenade tendered Gen. Garfield last night was a great success, Fifth Avenue and the surrounding streets being thronged with an enthusiastic crowd, numbering about 10,000.

After reviewing the procession he made a speech, during which, after referring to the action of the late war, he said:—

"Soon after the great struggle began we looked behind the army of white rebels and saw 4,000,000 of black people condemned to toil as slaves for our enemies and we found that the hearts of these 4,000,000 were God-inspired with a spirit of liberty, and that they were our friends. [Applause.]

"We have seen white men betray the flag and fight to kill the Union, but in all that long dreary war we never saw a traitor in black skin. [Great applause.]

"Our prisoners escaping from starvation or prison and fleeing to our lines by the light of the North Star never feared to enter a black man's cabin and ask for bread. [Good! Good! That's so, and loud cheers.]

"In all that period of suffering and danger no Union soldier was ever betrayed by a black man or woman. [Applause.] And now that we have made them free so long as we live we will stand by these black citizens. [Renewed applause.] We will stand by them until the sun of liberty fixed in the firmament of our constitution shall shine with equal rays upon every man black or white throughout the Union. [Cheers.] Now, fellow-citizens, fellow-soldiers, in this there is all the beneficence of eternal justice, and by this we will stand forever. [Great applause.] A great poet has said that in individual life we rise "on the stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things, and the republic rises on the glorious achievements of its dead and living heroes to a higher and nobler national life. [Applause.] We must stand guard over our race as soldiers, as patriots and ever regard our country as a common heritage of us all."

Excursion Train Ditched.

CINCINNATI, O., August 7.—A Waverly Ohio dispatch reports three passenger cars of an excursion train returning from the Niagara Falls to Jackson, Ohio, via Springfield on the southern railroad, went through a bridge into the canal at Waverly last evening. One hundred and twenty passengers were on the train, one was killed, ten severely injured and others slightly.

Shot Dead.

GALVESTON, August 7.—The News has the following special from Eunis, Texas: "R. L. Edwards, a Christian preacher, was called out of his house here last night by unknown parties and shot dead."

Died.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 7.—Gen. William O. Butler died at Carrollton yesterday, aged 89 years.

Suspended Payment.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—A Paris dispatch says that the Brunswick sugar refinery has suspended payment.

Irish Row.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—While the O'Connell procession was passing through the streets this afternoon they displayed "Sunburst," which gave great offence to the Orange party. Late to-night about 600 Roman Catholics and Orangemen met in Queen street and fought fiercely with stones and sticks. The police were called out and charged the mob, clubbing them right and left. At the Yonge street wharf the Empress of India had taken out a Catholic excursion, and an Orange crowd has gathered to prevent their landing. The boat has not yet returned and the crowd is comparatively quiet, but trouble may ensue when the excursionists try to land.

MIDNIGHT REPORTS.

Dr. Tanner.

NEW YORK, August 7.—On leaving the hall the doctor walked, unassisted, down stairs with a slice of melon in his hand. He received an ovation from the crowd in the street, shops and windows, and exhibited much gratification at the hearty reception. He ordered the cover of the carriage to be thrown back and joked and talked with the crowd that surrounded the vehicle. After two or three dozen persons had grasped his hand, two accompanying physicians had to grasp him by the arm and hold his seat to prevent him from tiring himself out, as they feared serious reaction from exertion. On reaching the residence of Dr. Gunn, Dr. Tanner at once lay down in the front parlor and endeavored to sleep. The milk and watermelon had not disagreed with him. Dr. Gunn himself is reported ill through overexertion. At 2:30 he was resting quietly in a good condition. He has eaten of watermelon in small quantities three or four times without deleterious effect.

At 3:30 Dr. Tanner drank one ounce of light Hungarian wine, after which he ate a small slice of watermelon. At 4:30 he was eating with great relish a piece of beef steak. He did not swallow the fibre, but only partook of the juice of the meat. He saw no visitors during the afternoon, and it was reported that he was in excellent spirits.

Saratoga Races.

SARATOGA, August 7.—The weather is pleasant, attendance good and track in fine condition.

First race, one mile and a furlong—Big Medicine first, Gabriel second and Juanita third. Time 1.58½.

Second race, for grand Union prize, handicap sweepstakes, all ages, mile and three-quarters—Luke Blackburn first, One Dime second and Glenmore third. Time 3.07.

Third race, Kentucky stakes, three-quarters of a mile—Brambaletta won, Hermit second, Calcanthus third. Time 1.19½.

Fourth race, selling race, one mile—Susquehanna won, Dan K. second and Charley Gorham third. Time 1.45.

Alabama Election Returns.

MONTGOMERY, August 7.—Returns continue to show that the Greenback State ticket, endorsed by the Republican Committee, was unknown in most of the counties. The Democratic vote is unusually full on account of the contest attaching to county offices, all of which were voted for. The Legislature will be almost solidly Democratic, and all judges and chancellors are the same. The Democratic majority on the State ticket will be fully 75,000.

Garfield's Train.

GREENWOOD, N. J., August 7.—A special train, bearing Garfield and his party, left Jersey City at 7.35 a. m. At Paterson, the first stopping place, about 6,000 persons had collected, mostly of the laboring classes. Garfield made a short speech. The train stopped at Middleton, Hancock and Susquehanna, at which places short speeches were made by Garfield and others of the party.

Damaged from Rain.

MONTGOMERY, August 7.—Recent rains have done much damage to the cotton crop. The worm had commenced to eat the cotton and the rain prevented poisoning as much as was needed. It is now thought that on the prairies and bottom lands not more than one-half the cotton will be made that was expected four weeks ago. Rust is injuring the cotton crop.

Georgia State Convention.

ATLANTA, August 7.—There was no change in the result on the 22d ballot for Governor in the Democratic Convention.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Virginia Military Institute,

LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA.

Session Opens 1st September.

The Report of the Special Board of Examiners for 1875 closes thus:—

In conclusion, your Committee cannot too highly commend what has seemed to them the marked and distinguishing features of this Institution, the happy combination of the military system of instruction with the departments of science and of literary culture, and the more ennobling culture of the heart and soul. Nowhere else have we seen this combination so complete and perfect. We cannot speak of it too highly. It is such a system as fits a pupil for life and for death. Under its guidance he is sure to tread always the path of duty, virtue and honor.

Jarvis and Buxton at Kinston!

IMMENSE CROWD!

Jarvis Enthusiastically Received!

[NEWS EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

KINSTON, August 7, 1880.

Gov. Jarvis left Raleigh on the excursion train this a. m., and arrived at Kinston in due time. At the depot was a large crowd in waiting, with the Newbern Silver Cornet Band on a wagon profusely decorated with flags. The Governor was escorted to a stand near the new Court House, where were soon assembled not less than three thousand persons. The discussion was opened by who was introduced by Mr. W. W. N. Hunter, Chairman Republican Committee of the county.

His speech was the same delivered at Kenansville, which was reported in THE NEWS of the 4th inst. It was dull and pointless, and lifeless in style of delivery. He dwelt with some emphasis on his early political training, that he was once a disciple of the elder Hale, and that the old Fayetteville Observer was his hand-book; charged that the Democratic party was responsible for the war and all its attendant evils, and claimed for the Radical party all that was grand and noble and great. Said he would forget the past, and yet the greater part of his speech was devoted to so much of the past as he fancied he could use to his purpose. He spoke his full time out, apparently more for the sake of filling it than with the hope of entertaining his hearers. Not a single demonstration of approval was made by any one, not even by his colored friends.

GOVERNOR JARVIS

was introduced by Mr. Jesse C. Kennedy, and at once addressed himself to the work before him—that of demolishing his adversary—which was done in a masterly manner and to the satisfaction and delight of all the Democrats. His answers to the arguments of Judge Buxton were pointed and conclusive in every instance. His sarcasm on the Judge as a disciple and follower of Mr. Hale was rich and relished by the whole crowd. He met every charge made by Judge B., and utterly and entirely refuted them all, from the record. The sale of the Western N. C. Railroad, the special tax bonds, and all of the Judge's pet charges fell to the ground under his fearless and bold exposition of all his votes and official connection with them. The Judge said he had employed legal counsel. The Governor said he did employ one lawyer to appear before the Supreme Court, but it was for the purpose of keeping the people from paying the special tax bonds, which the corrupt party to which the Judge belonged had brought into being. And then came the time for the Governor to and it was the verdict of old and young, that never in this State has a man received such a merciless castigation as did Judge Buxton. Perfectly calm and collected, and in the best humor imaginable, he called on the Judge to answer some plain questions, but the Judge dodged all that he could. The Governor called for a vote of the crowd as to whether it was fair and right that he should answer, and it was voted unanimously, but still he was dumb. The Governor managed, however, to get him to say that he would not have convened the Legislature to sell the Western Road, and that Holden while acting according to law, acted injudiciously in the Kirk war. The Judge was evidently greatly taxed to preserve a show of his amiability, but lost something of its soothing power by standing all the while with his back to the whites, who possibly might have appreciated a pleasant smile in all the mental torture he must have endured.

The readers of THE NEWS may draw their own conclusions as to the correctness of this report, when they are told that a special reporter for two Republican journals, after listening awhile to the Judge, left the stand in despair, if not disgust.

The behavior of the crowd was admirable, and the close attention of the colored people to Gov. Jarvis's speech was noticeable. They were very tame and seemed to be disappointed, while the Democracy were full of the liveliest enthusiasm. It was certainly a grand triumph for Gov. Jarvis and a splendid day for the Democracy of Lenoir.

At the conclusion of the appointed speaking, loud calls brought Capt. W. H. Kitchin to the stand. He spoke for nearly an hour on National questions, and the records and comparative merits of the Presidential candidates. His speech was strong and was well received.

The time had arrived for the departure of our train, and we left just as Gov. C. H. Brogden arose to address the crowd. We learned afterward that the purpose of his speech was to announce himself an independent candidate against the Radical nominee in his district. L. L. P.

P. S.—It may be proper to state that Judge B. did not read his speech to-day, but spoke from copious notes, which a prominent Republican says he intends to take from him when he meets him.

"THE FRIENDS OF EDUCATION."

We have printed the facts about Common School expenditures more than once before, but our Radical speakers need line upon line and precept on precept to teach them the truth; that is to say to teach them to speak it to the people. So we reprint from Hale's Weekly, the following facts compiled from the official reports of the Radical State Auditor and the Democratic School Superintendent.

From January, 1868, when the Radicals came into full possession of the State Government, until the 1st of October, the beginning of the next fiscal year, there was not a dollar of the Literary Fund spent for teaching, unless $69 paid to PILGRIM ASHLEY, then Superintendent of Public Instruction, for services of clerk can be so considered.

During the fiscal year beginning on the 1st of October, 1868, there was spent out of the Educational Fund $167,158.18. Not one dollar of this large amount was spent in teaching the poor children of North Carolina, white or black, to read or to write. Instead of that, the Radical Legislature took $158,000 of that amount and paid it, in part, to themselves under the name of per diem, at the rate of seven dollars a day; loaned $3,000 to the University to pay its so-called Professors; and the balance of the amount is put down to what is called "the expense account."

During the fiscal year beginning 1st of October, 1869, there was spent out of the Educational Fund, the sum of $203,411,-01, which was expended as follows:

Invested in Special Tax Bonds.....	$150,000 00
Expense acenunt.....	2,014 00
Poll tax returned.....	415 15
Paid to teachers of schools.....	38,981 86
Loaned to University.....	10,000 00
Loaned to Deaf and Dumb Asylum.	2,000 00
Total.....	$203,411 01

The investment in State bonds has, of course, proved an entire loss. Not one-fifth of the whole amount expended was applied to the Common Schools! Out of over two hundred thousand dollars expended, less than thirty-nine thousand was paid to teachers.

So much for our Common Schools under Radical rule. Before another fiscal year was ended the Radicals lost complete control of the State. Now for Democratic full rule. On the first of January, 1877, the Democrats came into possession of the entire government of North Carolina, save the Judicial branch thereof. Let us see what is being done in the cause of education under Democratic auspices. Superintendent SCARBOROUGH reports that for the year ending 30th September, 1877, the following disbursements were made of the public school fund, which fund amounted to $404,870.93:—

Teachers of schools for whites,	$ 169,682 94

Balance on hand 1st Sept., 1877,	115,657 61
Total as above stated,	$ 404,870 93

And for the fiscal year ending in 1878, Superintendent SCARBOROUGH reports the disbursements of the receipts as follows:

Teachers of schools for whites,	$ 188,822 86
Teachers of schools for colored,	104,070 12
School houses and sites for whites,	8,887 57
School houses and sites for colored,	3,976 47

Treasurers' commissions,	10,015 34
Clerks of Co. Boards of Education,	2,266 78

Total amount disbursed,	$ 324,287 10
Balance on hand Sept. 1st, 1878,	129,489 60
Total,	$ 453,776 70

For the last fiscal year Mr. SCARBOROUGH reports:—

Teachers of schools for whites,	$ 183,867 65
Teachers of schools for colored,	110,651 73
School houses and sites for whites,	9,599 43

JUDGE BUXTON is in the habit of mentioning in his speeches some things to which he is opposed. Among them, he particularly notes his oppcsition to members of the Legislature drawing more than lawful mileage, "as Lieutenant-Governor ROBINSON had done when he drew mileage three times" for the same trip to Raleigh. We suppose that if asked for his authority for such a statement, Judge BUXTON would answer, as in another particular, that "he saw it in a newspaper." If the Judge would seek for information where it is to be had, and not in imaginary or imaginative newspapers, he would neither have made the silly and wicked blunder of stating that the State Government was now run on borrowed money, nor the not less improper imputation against Governor ROBINSON. This charge which Judge BUXTON repeats on the stump in 1880, was made in the New York Times's Raleigh correspondence in April 1879. Governor ROBINSON was then here presiding over the State Senate, and, rising to a question of privilege on April 30th, he had the Times's article read, and denounced the charge as "false and atrocious, and the emanation of a base and cowardly spirit that could only lurk in the heart of a being capable of playing the part of an assassin." At Governor ROBINSON'S request, a committee of the Senate was appointed to investigate the matter, and this committee consisting of two Democratic and two Republican Senators, Messrs. J. I. SCALES, GILES MEBANE, ROBINSON WARD, and RUFUS WHITE, made report on March 6th fully vindicating the personal and official honor and integrity of Governor ROBINSON. Judge BUXTON will find the report in the Senate Journals of 1879, and if after reading it, or indeed after reading this statement of the matter, he should repeat the charge he would merit, as he would receive were Governor ROBINSON present, the same denunciation that was made of its author or authors.

GENERAL WILLIAM O. BUTLER, whose death is announced in this morning's telegrams, was little known to the present generation, but was a man of note thirty years ago, distinguished alike in law, politics and war. He was born in Kentucky in 1793, and while yet a youth enlisted as a private at the beginning of the war of 1812. He fought through the war and at its close was Major in the United States army, winning every step in his promotion by an act of gallantry or useful service. When the war closed he resigned and practiced law in Kentucky until the beginning of the war with Mexico, when he again entered the army, was soon made Major-General, and at the end of the war, in which he had conducted himself with notable gallantry, was in command of the United States army in Mexico. In 1848 he was the Democratic candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with General CASS. He was beaten, and took no further part in public affairs except to serve as a member of the Peace Congress which met at Washington in 1861 to attempt a settlement of the impending war between the States.

COPYING FROM THE NEWS a part of Mrs. SPENCER'S last cheerful letter, our friend of the Charlotte Democrat expresses the hope that "some one will compile the facts about the large number of private schools and seminaries, as well as the colleges, in successful operation in this State, and make a speech or lecture about the matter, and let us hear the other or encouraging side of the story." If our friend can find the speaker we can furnish him with most of the facts and save him an expensive, troublesome and thankless job. They were collected and printed a few years ago, in the series of articles with which we set out on the work of helping the cause of education in North Carolina.

THE NEWS never complains of an omission to credit to it news or other matter originating in its columns, knowing that the failure is very rarely intentional, and, indeed, caring nothing for credit any way except in so far as it might advertise THE NEWS. But that is no reason why THE NEWS should not thank the Newbernian and the Hickory Press for their courteous acknowledgment in using a very expensive item which reached them first in THE NEWS, though they had many other copies of it before their own papers were printed.

Crops in the East.

[NEWS EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

KINSTON, August, 7, 1880.

I have within the past few days, had an opportunity to look at the crops in several counties of the East. I have never seen them excelled, if equalled. The corn, cotton, peas, potatoes, chufas, rice, &c., are of the most vigorous and luxuriant growth, and the old men tell me, the prospect for full crops, was never better within their recollection. The heavy rains of the past few days have created grave apprehensions in regard to the cotton crops, but as yet the effect cannot be judged. Crops on bottom lands must necessarily suffer from freshets in the streams. I am told that the dredging of the Neuse under the supervision of Gen. Robt. Ransom, has had the effect to deepen the channel at least four feet—a fact which the farmers along its banks were not slow to discover in the recent freshet. Unless some unforeseen calamity befalls the corn crop, our Eastern friends will have little use for Northern corn for the next season. They are unusually cheerful, and seem to feel that a better day for them is in the near future. L. L. P.

POLITICAL NOTES:—

The Cincinnati Gazette is very much alarmed, or pretends to be, because the Democrats have chosen as their candidate "a major-general in the regular army, a warrior whose favorite weapon is the bayonet." Its real objection is that in the opinion of this warrior, "the bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen."

The Pittsburg Leader, Radical paper, has had enough of Hancock's letters. The letter to Sherman, it says, "is boomerang enough for the present. It is so manly and moderate and patriotic; aye, and so statesmanlike, that if we were an organ we would be secretly sorry that we ever "demanded" its publication. Nor would we be consumed with curiosity to know whether he wrote any more letters—till after the election."

The North Carolina delegates present at the Garfield Campaign Conference in New York were William P. Cannady, T. N. Cooper, T. B. Keogh, A. Hicks, Isaac J. Young, Thomas Power, E. Hubbs, J. J. Mott, Thomas B. Kehoe. The Tribune says that "most of the Southern States were represented by Republicans who have kept the faith through all the trials of ostracism and persecution of the past fifteen years. The general sentiment among these men was that while they did not want their section to be cut adrift by the Republicans of the North as hopelessly in the power of the rebel Democracy, they could give no encouragement of success as the result of any amount of effort there. Florida was the only State where a prospect of Republican victory was held out. One or two Congressional Districts in Virginia, two in North Carolina and two in South Carolina were said to be worth contesting."

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

Dr. Grissom's Address.

EDITOR NEWS:—Allow me a little space, as one of your constant and edified readers, to notice the address recently delivered in Wilmington before the Medical Society of North Carolina, by Dr. Eugene Grissom. I find this address in the July number of the North Carolina Medical Journal.

The North Carolina Medical Society is in the twenty-eighth year of its existence. It has been from the first a very useful and beneficent organization. It has achieved much in the field of science, and conferred lasting benefits on society; but I think I may say, with strict truth, that the most edifying and useful of all its emanations is this address by Dr. Grissom, in which he meets and explodes the assumptions of such men as Darwin, Huxley, Haeckel and others, and demonstrates the truth of Divine Revelation. Such defences of Christianity are always in order, and are always, I regret to say, necessary. Gen. Clingman's reply to these scientific infidels, which appears as a sort of preface to his recently published volume of speeches, is a masterly refutation of their doctrines, and does credit alike to his head and heart; but Dr. Grissom has gone more fully than he did into the argument, and, meeting these writers on their own grounds, has overwhelmed them by the weight of scientific authority which he adduces. It is not my purpose to flatter Dr. Grissom, for he does not need it, and would not receive it, but I wish heartily as one Christian man to thank him for the powerful and conclusive paper read by him before the Association in support of the great truths of Christianity. Neither should I ask you to copy the scientific parts of the address, for that would be too great a demand on your space, but I venture to request that you will make room for the following paragraphs with which Dr. Grissom closes his address:

"My brethren of the medical art in North Carolina, in departing from the usual address before your body, upon the familiar topics of medical history or of technical improvement, to ask you to consider the grave inquiries placed before you, I am obeying a voice from the grave.

"Since you last assembled the sod has covered the breast of one of England's most eminent physicians, and one of the most devoted sons of science. An investigator of high distinction, and an editor of the first medical authority in the world, he left a last legacy to the medical profession, in the following lines, which he requested his brethren of the Lancet to publish, whenever angina pectoris should strike his death blow:

'I die a Christian, in the now, I fear, much despised sense of that term, a simple believer in Jesus Christ as a personal, living and loving Saviour, without any righteousness of my own, but perfect and secure in His; and that 'I know in whom I believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him until that day.'

'The touching comment by his editorial comrade, upon these solemn and pathetic words from beyond the veil, is written as follows:

'The physician who in his own person consciously bears about with him the poignard that shall put a period to his existence, even feels its sharp point at his heart; knows when and how it will strike him: sees the shadow of death thrown distinctly across his path, by each gleam of the sunshine so joyous to those around him: The man who being thus haunted, is not all his lifetime subject to bondage, must have that within him which surpasses mere human strength, or be steeped in a Lethe of forgetfulness impossible to understand.

'We know the treasures of knowledge acquired by such men are not lost, but their own share of the fruits of labor—what becomes of that? Why are they deprived of their reward?

'Questions like these will rise unbidden in the mind; in days of narrow-minded and short-sighted materialism, when scientists seem to exult in destroying the fond hope of immortality, while they have nothing to offer in the stead of this aspiration; when there is a growing disposition to scoff at all that lies beyond the horizon of sense, or outside Nature, and it is counted a triumph of intellect to believe in nothing which cannot be demonstrated by the puny appliances and processes science has already discovered—it is unwise to rebuke these questionings of the inner soul of man, a veritable entity, albeit the principle we feel within is not to be laid bare by the scalpel of the anatomist, or brought under the physiologists here.

"In the name of science and humanity, let us have more of this spirit of hope and purpose and confidence in the Future, for it enables men to bear the ills of life placidly, to do its work honestly and earnestly; it cheers the spirit in life, and helps it to gaze calmly on the dread visage of Death, and to meet him cheerfully in the hour of his triumph.' * * * —London Lancet, June 14, 1879.

'The time has come to speak out boldly on this subject, and we are persuaded the good sense and self-respect of the profession will approve the protest against that spirit of restless antagonism to the claims of religion which has unhappily obtained fuller expression in a small section of our ranks during the last few years, and which if not repudiated, must be expected to increase, * * *

'We agree that the physician should not usurp the functions of the minister of religion, but he is forbidden by the spirit of manliness, to take refuge in the opposite extreme of moral cowardice, with a pretence of indifference.'—Lancet, July 12, 1879.

"These words, wrung from the aching heart of the friend and colleague of Tilbury Fox, strike the key note of that strain of thought, to which I have ventured to ask you to lend your sympathy.

"Oh! it is not the physician, who daily walks among the mysteries that underlie all our social life, who sees the human heart bare in the very crisis of fate, who wipes the sweat of mortal anguish from the brow, who witnesses the punishment of God's own messenger in the remorse of the convict, who shudders at the depths of despair in the maniac's cry, who struggles by the new-made mother at the very jaws of death, and hears the entreaty of soul even though the thickening terrors that enshroud that feeble body, as she cries, "Save my child, whether I perish or no!" it is not such a man, surely, who can believe that man is but a beast, and spirit but a dream.

"The physician enters the inmost sanctuary of home-life. He is a partaker in its brightest hopes, or its most agonizing fears. He is the confidant of its dearest secrets, and the stay and comforter of its darkest hours. How his heart rejoices with those whom his art restores again to health and strength; with the sufferer for long years, relieved by the surgeon's knife; or with the young parents filled with unspeakable joy at the music of the new-born babe!

"How the soul is stirred in sympathy within him, as he beholds the maniac clothed again in the panoply of reason, and welcomed to a mother's bosom or a father's arms of protecting love.

"Alas, the physician must turn from scenes of delight like these, to watch the step of the destroyer, noiseless and resistless, day by day; to see that pallid shade steal over the face of a friend, perhaps a life-long and devoted companion, to whom he must announce the sentence of departure; and when all is over, to mingle his grief with the orphan's sorrow, at the edge of the opened grave.

"Dealing with the most solemn, the most mysterious and sacred problem of mortal life, and privileged beyond all others in the knowledge of the bodies of men around us, can it be possible that our task is wholly done, when we have wrought with our hands upon the body, like some artisan adjusting the wheels of some inert machine? Is it all, to physic or carve the body of man as a mere animal, regardless of his nobler part, like unto the jeweller who engraves his gold?

"No, the noblest minds of the profession have ever felt that the moral influence of the physician is inseparable from his healing art. Not a few in our crowded towns, or in secluded country homes, rarely attend Christian worship, and to them the face of the medical visitor is as the countenance of a missionary of good—the most elevated influence that reaches them, in the midst, perhaps, of ignorance, poverty or wretchedness.

"The moral influence of the physician must be an enormous social force. It radiates by the bedside, and attends upon his footsteps in his daily rounds. By its purity and devotion to the loftiest interest of man, it will lift fellow-men to higher and nobler lives; or alas! in its pride and vanity, it will deaden the faith and chill the hopes of those whose bodies he would cure.

"Jeremy Taylor quaintly but beautifully said:

'And what greater measure can we have than that we should bring joy to our brother, who, with his dreary eyes, looks to heaven and round about, and cannot find so much rest as to lay his eyelids close together—than, that thy tongue should be tuned with heavenly accents, and make the weary soul to listen for light and ease; and when he perceives that there is such a thing in the world, and in the order of things, as comfort and joy, to begin to break out from the poison of his sorrows at the door of sighs and tears, and by little and little melt into showers and refreshment? This is glory to thy voice, and employment fit for the brightest angel."

"But the moral influence of the physicians of our land must be invoked, for its exercise on a wider plane than ever, for the preservation of society against the inroads of doctrines that threaten to reduce all limits and conditions, and all law, human or Divine, to chaos. Since it is under the pretence of demonstration by anatomical science that materialism is preparing to rend asunder the bonds of society, a special responsibility has fallen upon the profession, to rebuke these plunderers of the heritage of faith, and with due humility, but unflinching courage, to defend the treasures of revelation and eternal hope.

"The moral plague has already reached the shores of America, and unlike its physical prototype, finds its victims first among the cultured, and the men of great, if unsymmetrical learning. From the extraordinary freedom of our social economy, it must be expected to spread with more or less rapidity, and perhaps to reach an enormous development in the coming generation.

"When a whole people shall believe, if the materialists succeed, that they are but special and elevated beasts, born of the ancestry of the brute, and destined to die the death of the beast, unto utter annihilation, then will they complete the logical chain, and live the life of the beasts that perish. Humanity sickens at the contemplation of such a world as would inevitably result.

"Who knows but that this day which seems to us so full of excitement and excess and feverish unrest, years to come may be looked upon, as the golden era of content! What indeed would become of whatsoever things are of good report, in an age which regarded the theories of materialism as the highest truth! What would be the wild pulse of a world lashed to fever heat, in the mere dread and terrible struggle for existence, that the fittest, that is the fiercest and most brutal, may survive!

"What a dissolving panorama of the destruction of the noblest monument of man rises before the mind. Religion, literature, philanthropy and art slowly vanishing away—confidence leaving the marts of trade; humanity deserting the hospitals to loneliness and desolation; justice tearing the bandage from her eyes and yielding her embrace to the strongest might, aye, and last of all, love no longer fed by the charities of life, bidding farewell to the households of earth, leaving the world, at last, the paradise of beasts.

"In America, your profession stands at the head of the social scale. What greater work can it achieve than to meet the infection on the threshold? This plague can do its deadly work only through moral corruption. You, whose hands are dedicated to the healing of fellow-man, have the prophylactic in your charge. No higher duty can enlist your efforts through life. And in that final hour of your pilgrimage on earth—a pilgrimage devoted to the alleviation of suffering and distress—as you approach to put on that robe of immortality, which the materialist dreads more than he despises, there will mingle with the grateful prayers of relieved humanity on earth, the cheering announcement from the great Physician of souls, whose truths you have believed and whose commands you have obeyed, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.'"

A Philadelphia census taker tells an amusing story. He had obtained all the information he wanted at a large pretzel bakery and was about to leave when the wife of the proprietor stepped out and inquired:

"Vat for you ask such foony queshtions?"

"I am a special agent, madam," was the reply, "and I am engaged in taking the statistics of manufactures."

"Manny Facters? Who vas dot? I don't know no such mans."

"Manufactures, madam—making boots and shoes and clothes and so on."

"Bootses und shoes! Ach Gott! You vos crazy, ain't it? Ve bake nodings but bretzels here, me und my oldt mans. Ve don't know nodings 'bout shoes."

A Sweet Wild Rose.

"Well, since you mention it yourself, Hal, I will confess that I was surprised to find you engaged to Miss Brookfield," said Ned Chester to his life-long chum, Hal Elmendorf (the two young men were leisurely strolling through Maple avenue), "for when I went abroad you were most emphatically denouncing the heartlessness and selfishness, and extravagance, and a few other amiable characteristics—according to your way of thinking at the time—of society girls, and apparently sincere in your determination to remain a bachelor rather than marry one of them; and your letters have given no hint of a change in your sentiments. Quite the contrary. Your last, by-the-by, was most perplexing. No woman's letter could have been more so. In it you suddenly jumped from the Clauson Mine to 'a sweet wild rose,' of whom you had previously told me nothing. If I remember aright the sentence introducing her read thus: 'And the dividends this year are much larger than sweet wild rose that I have found in this lonely place, and am almost persuaded to court and marry, after the manner of Tennyson's landscape painter."

Elmendorf threw away his cigarette, looked thoughtfully into space a moment, dropped into a still slower walk, and asked, "Should you like to hear all about it, old fellow?"

"Of course I should," replied Chester. "Lives there a man with soul so dead who ever to himself hath said, 'I take no interest in sweet wild roses'? And besides that, haven't I been the confidant of all your love affairs since you were twelve, and awfully smitten with the pretty girl in Wild's confectionery? Drive ahead. I'm all attention."

"As you remarked a few moments ago," began Elmendorf, "just before you crossed 'the briny,' I became disgusted with fashionable young ladies in general, and, as you did not remark, for fear of hurting my feelings, with Eudora Brookfield in particular. It was rather hard on a romantic sort of a fellow, who was awful spoony on a girl, to be told by that girl that his fortune considerably enhanced his attractions in her eyes, and that for her part she thought love in a cottage on less than five thousand a year must be the dreariest of existences. We quarrelled, as you know, and parted. She went, shortly after, to Newport, and I, filled with scorn of managing mammas and fortune-hunting daughters, donned a blue flannel suit and coarse broad-brimmed hat, and carrying with me only a small valise, started for anywhere—anywhere out of the world.

"At noon of my second day's travel the train stopped at a quiet, tree-embowered station, and following the impulse of the moment I jumped off and struck into a lonely shady road, resolving to keep on on foot until Fate should say, 'Thus far and no farther.' Ned, that road was certainly the loneliest road I ever saw. Not a person did I meet, not a house did I see in an hour's brisk tramp. But I trudged on, and the more Eudora's beauty and grace flitted before me, the more her sweet voice rang out in the song of the birds, the more my heart yearned for her smile, the more I was determined to put miles between us. I would not be married for my fortune. I would be loved for myself, or not at all. And growing stronger in resolution at every step, I suddenly found myself in front of a small gray cottage—I remembered instantly that Eudora had a silk dress of the same shade of gray—half-covered with woodbines and rose-vines, that stood just at the entrance of a dense wood, where grew oaks, maples, willows, elder bushes, blackberry bushes, and Heaven only knows how many other things, planted there by the winds and the birds. A cow with a young calf beside her was lowing in a field opposite, and a brook was sparkling in the sunshine a short distance away.

"On the porch of this cottage sat a middle-aged woman sewing. To her, hat in hand, I advanced and humbly preferred a request for a drink of water; and she, rising with hospitable quickness, bade me take the seat she left while she went to the well. I sank into the chair, for I was aweary, and she returned with a glass of water and a glass of milk. I drank them both—not at once, of course, but during the conversation about the weather that ensued—and had risen to depart, when the prettiest girl in blue and gold that I ever beheld came tripping up the garden-path, a pail of water in each hand. 'A sweet wild rose,' I said to myself, and sat down again, convinced by a single glance at that lovely face and form that this cottage was Fate's 'No farther.'

"Accordingly, I told mine hostess that I was a poor story-writer (you will admit that that was no lie, for all the editors to whom I have submitted my manuscripts have said the same thing), with a book to finish, and that of all places in the world to finish it in, her beautiful quiet home seemed the best, and I begged her to let me stay there a few weeks, promising to make her as little trouble as possible. 'Well, I don't see nothin' agin it if father and daughter don't said she, and away she went again, and from the murmur of voices in the hall I knew the matter was being discussed by the family. And in a few moments a shrewd-looking old man appeared, looked at me sharply, and asked brusquely, "Kin you 'ford to pay $4 a week?" I told him I thought I could, and he seized my valise and carried it it into the cottage, I following. Ned, old chap, it was a lovely spot, and no mistake. Every morning the birds awakened me with their songs, and they were so fearless, never having learned how cruel men can be, that they flew in at my window and perched upon the frame of the old looking glass—such a rum old glass (crooked my nose and crossed my eyes)—and watched me dress; and fragrance enough from the rose vines floated into that attic room in one day to have perfumed Eudora's handkerchiefs for a whole year.

"As for Alice—the sweet wild rose—no poet ever dreamed of maid more beautiful. Large, innocent, dark-blue eyes, with lashes so long that they cast a faint shadow on her rounded cheeks; mouth, nose, chin, ears, hands, feet, simply perfection; and a voice, not as musical as Eudora's, it is true, but with a childish ring and sweetness; and when she spoke, which was seldom, it was with a pretty modest hesitancy that made you long to catch her in your arms and kiss the words from her full red lips. I had only seen her [illegible] times when I was madly in love with [illegible] and thought the plain calico gowns [illegible] wore the prettiest gowns in the [illegible] Her father and mother watched us [illegible] but that blessed (as I thought [illegible] drought had set in a week or so [illegible] our rain-water cask—we hadn't [illegible] the dignity of a cistern—was empty [illegible] our well ran low, and much water [illegible] be brought from the brook, and of [illegible] I helped the sweet wild rose carry [illegible] pails, and (again, as I thought then) [illegible] brook was a blessed quarter of a mile [illegible] the house; and one day, after tramping this quarter of a mile with the pails [illegible] bonnie Alice, I wrote you a very long letter, in which, among many other things, reviewed my Eudora experience, and told you of the treasure I had found in the cottage by the wood. And a few [illegible] after posting this letter I asked the sweet wild rose to be my wife. She raised her glorious, innocent blue eyes to mine for an instant, and then hid them upon my breast, while she whispered—the shy darling—

"'Don't ask father and mother just until I get used to the thought. It seems so very strange.'

"'And are you sure you love me? and will you be willing to wear calico gowns and live in a little cottage all your life?' said I.

"'Try me,' she replied, with [illegible] cheeks and an arch smile.

"'Now, am I really loved?' said I [illegible] birds, next morning—not having [illegible] I made confidants of them, and [illegible] they never betrayed me. 'It is Hal Elmendorf wins the heart of Alice, not his fortune—no sighing for gems and [illegible] longing for silks and velvets and [illegible] knows this simple country maid. She even unaware of her own marvelous [illegible] and beauty, and she is also unaware [illegible] cannot be denied, of many of the [illegible] grammar and pronunciation. But [illegible] can soon teach her. Heaven bless [illegible] And then I thought what delight it would be to see those guileless blue eyes [illegible] wide in pleasure and astonishment [illegible] after gaining her parents' consent to marriage, I placed a diamond ring on the little hand. And I made up my mind to start for the nearest city immediately and obtain the ring.

"So, pleading urgent business, darling, as soon as breakfast was over, bade her good-bye for a day or two.

"'Oh, if you should never come back,' she sobbed, clinging around my neck.

"'But I will, dearest,' I said, [illegible] her lovely arms and kissing the tears from her eyes. 'I shall be back again before you have time to miss me. And I [illegible] for I had only gone a mile or two when I discovered I had left my pocket-book behind, and full of anger against myself for my carelessness, I hastened back. As I neared the cottage, I heard [illegible] the voices of Mrs. Burdock, my prospective mother-in-law, and—cold it yes, it was my sweet wild rose.

"'Well, it's a regular mess, and I don't know what to say to Bill Tyron when he comes back from the sea,' the elder was saying. 'He'll raise the ruff [illegible] house.'

"'Let him,' replied Alice. 'I'll get you a better house—nearer to [illegible] for I'm sure I never want to [illegible] to this lonely hole again after I leave it.'

"'But s'pose this man should be rich, after all?' persisted the [illegible] mamma.

"'He's as rich as Screechus,' [illegible] the daughter, in anything but a voice. And, oh! how dreadful the [illegible] mar and pronunciation sounded in [illegible] you think I'd give up Bill if I were [illegible] of it? He write a long rigmarole to [illegible] friend of his one day, and he lost a [illegible] and I found it—'"

"The page almost ending with [illegible] Clauson Mine, and nearly beginning [illegible] the sweet wild rose," interrupted [illegible]

"Just so," asserted his friend, [illegible] to go on with the conversation. [illegible] I boldly confess, I deliberately [illegible] 'I found it, he never missed it, and [illegible] it,' said the simple country maid. [illegible] fash'nable girl wanted him for his [illegible] and he got mad and cleared out, [illegible] walked around till he found me. [illegible] wild rose he calls me, and he ain't [illegible] out, neither.'

"'You'd better let your Pa [illegible] about him some before you promise [illegible] to marry him,' advised Mrs. Burdock.

"'Rubbish!' exclaimed the [illegible] goin' snoopin' round might spy [illegible] thing. I know he's got lots of [illegible] and I bet he's gone off to buy [illegible] thing elegant now. Calico gowns [illegible] I'll wear silk every day of my life. [illegible] come along, ma, let's go upstairs, [illegible] he's left his satchel unlocked and [illegible] rummage through it.'

"'No, he hasn't,' said I, coming [illegible] ward, 'but don't let that prevent you [illegible] joying yourselves, ladies; here is [illegible] at your service.'

"With a shrill scream the [illegible] rose fled. I reached my roost un[illegible] eaves in three bounds, gathered [illegible] my belongings, left some banknotes [illegible] table, and fled too.

"And I am to marry Eudora [illegible] a month from to-day."

Much complaint, and justly too, is made at the manner in which wood is sold from wagons on the streets. The law governing the sale of wood has been published in this paper on one or two occasions and should be enforced strictly.

Now that Dr. Tanner has finished his foolish fasting, we will hear of other fools all over the country imitating him. If the Darwinian theory that characteristics of man can be found in the monkey be untrue, certainly many of the ways of the monkey are prominent in some men, particularly that of imitating the foolish.

DEATH LIST.—The mortuary report for the week ending Saturday evening at sunset, August 7, 1880.

August 2d. Victor E. Jackson, white, city; 5th ward; age, 2 years. Enteric fever.

August 3d. Thomas Young, colored, city; 5th ward; age, 29 months. Remittent fever.

August 3d. J. H. Birdsong, white, city; 1st ward; age, 7 hours. Premature, and insufficient vitality.

August 5th. Mattie Graham, colored, city; 4th ward; age, 2 years. Dysentery.

August 6th. George Horton, white, city; 2nd ward; age, 23 years. Pulmonary consumption.

August 6th. Harriet B. Bobbitt, white, city; 2nd ward; age, 91 years. Old age.

A permit was given by a magistrate for the interment of a still-born child. The health of the city is good, three sporadic cases of diptheria are reported to the Superintendent of Health.

COWS.—Cows are a good vegetable in their proper place. Laws concerning cows are good also, but to do that for which it was enacted the law must be rigidly enforced. Some time since an ordinance was created by our City Fathers forbidding cows to run at large during the night, and last evening a gentleman called in and requested us to give the cows, the Board of Aldermen or somebody else fits. He was returning home the night before and it was dark unto blackness. Upon the sidewalk lay a cow which he tumbled over. He addressed himself in no very flattering terms to the cow and her owner, and proceeded on his way but a short distance before he ran into another cow. This was too much and turning he hunted the nearest newspaper office to give vent to his abuse of cows.

We thank the young man for an item, but really cows lying on the sidewalks for people to stumble over should be abated. Let the law be enforced.

TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.—It is fast approaching the time for our county nominating convention, and it behooves the party in every township to organize, and it should be done right away; suitable persons to represent each township should be selected for the County Executive Committee; delegates who will have the best interests of the party at heart should be chosen to attend the County Convention, and all this should be done now. Past experience must have taught us that we have never been thoroughly organized in Wake county. If the Democratic voters will go to the polls and vote for their party nominees, we can carry everything in the county; but to do it work now must be done, so as to make up our county ticket deliberately, harmoniously, and of our best men.

BE CAREFUL.—These cool nights are likely to cause much sickness, particularly such as colds, sore throats and others of like character. The first appearance of a soreness of the throat should be attended to as a prevention to diphtheria, which is prevailing to some extent in other localities.

THE STATE CANVASS.

Judge BUXTON's friends not being authorized to make further appointments for joint discussion, the Democratic Committee announce the following appointments for Governor JARVIS. Judge BUXTON has been invited and is expected to attend and participate in the discussions:

HINDOO AND SPINAWAY.—The Autumn Stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club has closed with twenty-five entries, including the unbeaten filly Spinaway and Swigert's phenomenal son of Virgil, Hindoo. The stake is for 2 year old colts and fillies each to carry 100 pounds, except the two named, who carry 110 pounds. The club adds $2,000 to the stakes. Fourteen of the youngsters entered have already been bracketed, and in the dark division are several who, from their pedigree, should run well to the front in any company. Hindoo and Spinaway are on the record the best of the year, almost the best of any year, but ten pounds over three-quarters of a mile is big weight for two year olds to give away; and if Creekmore, Brambaletta, Spark and Ada feel well it will take two prophets to pick the winners.

CAPITOL NOTES:—

One drummer's license was issued from the Treasury Department to George W. Helme, of New York.

In the Executive Department Captain Dudley sat all alone, and reported matters serenely quiet. Only this and nothing more.

In the Auditor's Department we found a fire burning and around it sat the popular clerk and the reporters of the various papers. The fire was all we could find of any interest there.

The Secretary of State's full force was busy packing and addressing to the different counties the election laws, and the necessary blanks for election returns.

The other departments were equally devoid of news, and the capitol square itself looked dull.

THE LATE RAIN.—All the creeks and branches in this county have been out of their banks, and from a gentleman who passed over it yesterday we hear that fears are entertained that the new bridge over Neuse river will be carried away. Several bridges over smaller streams have been damaged by drift wood and others are in a dangerous condition. Pool's bridge and Battle's bridge over Neuse river have both been swept away and the river is rapidly rising. The rain has been very general and unusually heavy, and fears are entertained that much damage will be done to bridges and crops. In the Deep River section the crops in the lowlands are already being much hurt, and the river still rising.

ASKEW'S PAPEE MILLS.—We learned from Mr. W. H. Goodwin, yesterday evening, that the unusual rise in Neuse river was doing great damage. The paper mills of W. F. Askew at Falls of Neuse are in great danger. When Mr. Goodwin left there was five feet of water in the mills, and already the machinery is seriously damaged. Mr. Askew is fearful that the mills will be carried away. The people there are expecting the Falls of Neuse bridge to go at any time, which, if it should do and strike the mills, great damage will be the result. Mr. Askew places his damages already sustained at from $2,500 to $3,000.

THE CIRCUS.—Two large bill boards have been erected for the circus bills, one 200 feet long at Moore Square, the other 100 feet long on Martin street between Salisbury and McDowell. The advance agent and paste brigade of the show will arrive here on Tuesday next, when the day and date will be advertised. The canvas will be spread on Nash Square, City Park.

COTTON RECEIPTS.—We are indebted to Mr. Alf. A. Thompson, Secretary of the Cotton Exchange, for the following official report of receipts of cotton for the week ending Saturday, August 6:—

Receipts for the week,	223	bales.
Receipts same week last year,	213	"
Increase for the week,	10	"
Total receipts to date,	50,958	"
Total receipts same date last year,	46,182	"
Increase to date,	4,776	"

WAKE POLITICS:—

Wake Co., Aug. 5th.—Before the meeting of the County Convention to nominate candidates, I wish to present to the Democratic party of the county the name of a young man as one of its candidates for the House of Representatives in the next Legislature.

Where the election is so closely contested as it is in our county, we must not only select good, but also available men. We must go into the canvass with some chance of success. The gentleman to whom I allude has ability, and will make a fine representative, and if nominated will be elected. I present to the Democratic party of Wake county the name of Alfred D. Jones, of Cary. He is a Democrat by inheritance, being the grand-son of that faithful servant of the people, Daniel W. Courts, Esq., and likewise the son of Wesley Jones, deceased—that sterling old Democrat who represented this county years ago so faithfully.

In the canvass Mr. Jones will have no personal prejudices to encounter—he has no enemies. Generous, noble, kind-hearted to a fault, he will be irresistible in the canvass. He is also the peer of any man for his age, in the State, as an orator, and it nominated he will wake up old Wake from one end to the other.

This year we are to have a grand Democratic jubilee in electing our State and National ticket, and let us see to it that Wake is not "left out in the cold," but that she is purged of Radical misrule and theft, and robed in the beautiful garments of Democratic faith. Alfred D. Jones is the man to robe her. P. D. P.

EDITOR NEWS:—While others are being named for places on the Democratic ticket, I would beg permission to mention for the place of State Senator the name of Capt. E. R. Stamps. There is not a more available man in the county, and having, as he does, the confidence of all sections, he can carry the county if Democrats will but do their duty. DEMOCRAT.

What North Carolinians are Doing.

GLEANINGS FROM STATE EXCHANGES.

Montgomery crops and Montgomery politics are well reported of by the Rockingham South.

The Press says that Catawba's tax levy for State and county is 60 cents on property and 1.80 on polls. The property valuation of the county is $2,108,874.

Mr. George I. Freeman, the Rockingham South says, will gather twelve bales of cotton from six acres of poor land near Hamlet. He manures well and cultivates intelligently.

The Richmond county magistrates have elected the following county commissioners: Peter McRae, John McKay, Jas. McIntosh, Capt. Jas. T. Bradley and Capt. William I. Everett.

The Toisnot Home says that the Wilson Democrats have nominated for the House of Representatives R. J. Taylor; Register of Deeds, W. M. Gay; Treasurer, J. W. Farmer; Surveyor, E. R. Ellis.

The magistrates of Wilson, the Advance says, last week levied a tax of 27½ cents for county, school, and poor funds. They elected the following commissioners: Dr. D. G. W. Ward, John D. Wells, John H. Barnes, Wiley Deans and B. A. Howard.

The Charlotte Democrat quotes flour at 3.00 to 3.25; wheat 1.00; corn and meal 60 to 62; oats 45 to 50; new sweet potatoes 1.00; Irish 75 to 90; mutton 8 to 10; beeswax 20; butter 20 to 22; eggs 10; chickens 10 to 15; corn whisky 1.25; apple brandy 1.50.

The Charlotte Observer says that Col. Keogh, Register in Bankruptcy, will close up the affairs of the Bank of Mecklenburg on the 25th inst. Creditors are officially notified that the meeting will be held at 10 o'clock a. m. The assignee calculates that the final dividend will be something less than one per cent.

The Hickory Press says that crops through Iredell and Davie counties are much better than was expected—the tobacco, especially, is doing finely this season. Of Catawba tobacco, Capt. Davis, who is a thoroughly practical tobacco grower, says that the crop is unusually good this season and that everything is now favorable to an unusually large crop of the weed on the next market.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS:—

The Lord's Prayer, worked in worsted, and prettily framed, was the ground of action in the case of Barringer vs. Barringer, called for trial in Troy a few days ago. The contestants proved to be mother and daughter, and each assumed to be the legal owner of the disputed work of art, which was finally awarded to the girl with the gentle admonition that she should study it carefully; the matron having already assured the Court that she was not capable of being led into temptation.

The rains have been heavy on the other side too, and have caused terrible havoc in Silesia. Teplitz, Bohemia, is completely submerged. The damage over a large tract of country is incalculable. A fearful panic prevails in the flooded districts, and numerous casualties have occurred.

The census office says that the total population of the United States will be a little over 49,000,000. The official count will be needed to determine whether Ohio or Illinois is the third State of the Union in population.

Who is Your Wife?

A COMPLEX CONUNDRUM COLLOQUIALLY CONSIDERED.

BY WALDORF H. PHILLIPS.

We beg leave to announce that we have published, under the above title, a very novel and remarkable work. It is, in the form of fiction, a humorous and powerful satire on Divorce Laws and their complications. The author takes for his text a proposed new marriage ceremony, thus:—

"Do you take this woman to be your wife—until you are divorced?

"Do you take this man to be your husband—until you change your mind?

"Then, they whom I unite, let some Court put asunder."

The work is full of humor and keen satire; it is decidedly a most original and novel addition to American publications, and it is confidently believed will prove the literary sensation of the year. Price, in paper binding, 50c.; in cloth, 75c. Can be had of all Booksellers and News Dealers, or will be sent, postage paid, upon receipt of the price, by the publishers.
